

ILLUSTRATED Evening Ledger

THURSDAY
October 19, 1916

CHESTNUT STREET CANYON FROM BROAD STREET
As seen from the Land Title Building, the narrowness of the skyscraper-flanked eastward vista is emphasized.

PRESIDES AT TWO COURTS
Magistrate Evan T. Pennock dispenses justice at the Central Station daily after disposing of the hearings at the German-town police headquarters.

Pennsylvanian Presidential Straw Ballot

HUGHES
WILSON
BENSON
HANLEY

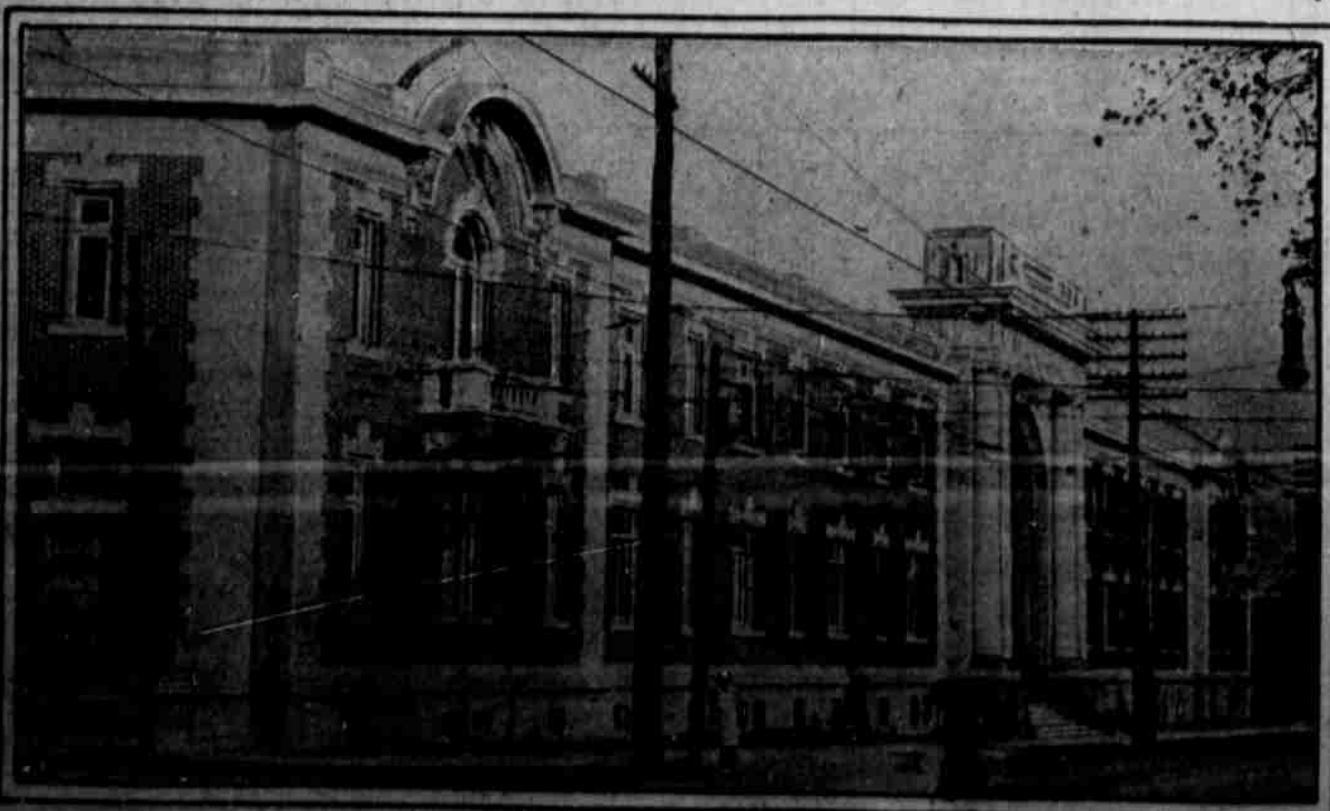

Place (X) mark opposite choice.
Polls open 12.30-2.30 and 5-8.

"ELECTION DAY" AT THE UNIVERSITY
The result of the straw vote on the presidency taken among the undergraduates of "Old Penn" was received today with interest rivaling that of a real contest. The ballot itself and the manner of marking and depositing thereof are shown.

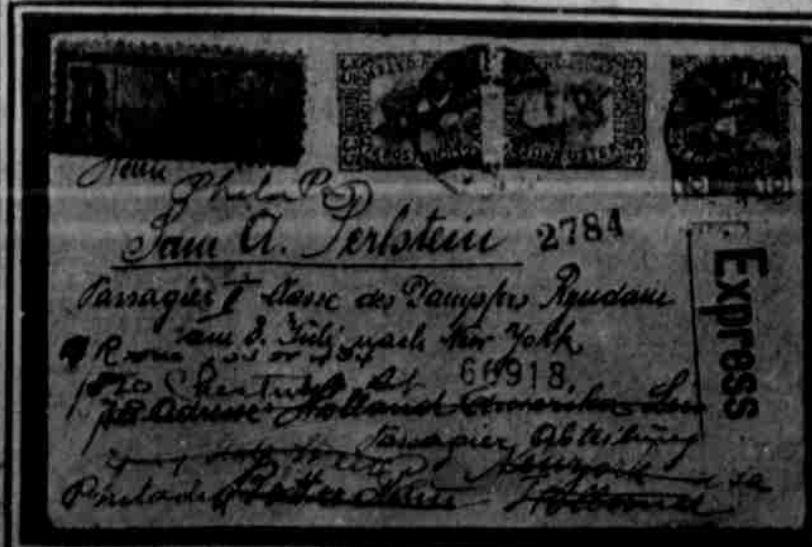

NO WONDER THEY HAD NO WATER!

This eel, measuring thirty-four and one-half inches, was taken from a three-inch water pipe in the Locust Laundry, Ninth and Locust streets, by W. J. Kennedy, who is exhibiting his "find."

FUTURE HOME OF OUR CITY TROOPERS

Work is being pushed on the new cavalry armory at Thirty-third street and Lancaster avenue, so that it may be ready for occupancy soon after our Philadelphia mounted troops return from border duty.

A MUCH-CENSORED MESSAGE

This envelope contained a letter which finally reached Samuel A. Perlstein, an American citizen of Russian birth, in the Baker Building. It was mailed in Vienna, and in its subsequent peregrinations was severely mishandled by the postal inspectors along its course in Philadelphia.